How Schools Should Help Students to Find Vocations

Superintendent Henry Peterson of the Logan City schools gave an address to the students of the Utah Agricultural College summer school at the regular student body exercises held Thursday last in the college chapel. He spoke on the subject of how the public schools should help the student in determining on a life vocation.

The meeting opened with a demonstration by the girls' chorus of suitable songs for the lower grades of school. These songs were sung under the direction of Professor Johnson of the college department of music. The choir then sang two selections, after which Paul K. Jenkins, president of the summer school student body, introduced Superintendent Peterson. Mr. Peterson began by reading an editorial from a well known newspaper which gave the professions of a large number of noted Americans. The remarkable truth was that only a very small percentage of these men were engaged in the occupation or profession which they expressed their greatest liking for. Superintendent Peterson emphasized this fact in his remarks and brought his talk down to the possibility of the schools materially aiding in the very important work of directing the careers of the students. He stated that our schools should pay strict attention to what the student is fitted for by natural aptitude and that the student should be allowed as much freedom as possible in selecting his course of study—under expert and careful supervision of course.

Selecting a vocation is not nearly as hard as it is commonly supposed to be if only the parent and teacher will notice the natural likes and dislikes of the child," stated Superintendent Peterson. "A child always has a variety of interests and it is safe to predict that he will succeed if he is allowed to fit himself for something in life for which he has a natural love and not aversion. Our schools should regulate their activities on that basis as far as possible."

Mr. Peterson remarked that it is much easier to choose the correct vocation for women than it is for men because all normal women have one desire uppermost in their minds—to be home makers. The problem is much more difficult for the male, due to his greater need to be placed in the Complaint against the condition of the street car tracks on North Washington avenue along the newly paved street, which is about two feet higher than the grade established by the pavement, is made by citizens of that district through the McLaughlin company which concern asks the Merchants of Ogden to take the matter up with the city commission and get some action looking to an immediate remedying of the defects.

The following letter, in which all the facts are stated, was written by the McLaughlin company of 1701 Washington avenue, to the Merchants of Ogden. A committee composed of E. T. Wright, chairman, Gomer Nicholas and R. T. Petty was appointed to take the matter up with the commissioners and endeavor to get the tracks lowered to proper grade in order to prevent serious accidents.

The McLaughlin letter to the Merchants says:

"To the Merchants of Ogden, Utah:

"As you have been taking an active part in the abolition and removal of all things detrimental to the city as well as encouraging things beneficial to the city, I, therefore, conclude that there is a matter which your body should investigate and if on such investigation you come to the conclusion that the same is a nuisance, you use your best endeavors with the city for relief.

"The paving on the west (north) side of the Ogden river bridge is almost completed to Five Points but not a thing has been done by the railroad company to bring its track to grade with the pavement and there is a jump-off from the railroad track on to the pavement from one to two feet along the entire length of the railroad.

"This is a menace to travelers and should be remedied. The street railroad company is not making any effort apparently to remedy this condition and the history of the company with similar projects has been one of constant delay and refusal to bring its railroad to a grade line and for two years it has neglected and failed and refused to make it. South Washington line conform to the paving ordinance and I do not think it should be given leeway on North Washington.

"I, therefore, ask you to take this matter up with the city commissioners and use your endeavors to see that this company places its lines at grade and I further suggest that if it refuses to remedy this that something must be done.

"You can readily see that one serious accident on account of this condition would involve as much as it would cost to bring this track to grade. Kindly render to we property owners on North Washington avenue such assistance to remedy this as possible.

Yours truly,

right place in life. Teachers should watch the natural leanings of their students and govern themselves accordingly.

Familiar situations are reversed all the way through Constance Talmadge's latest Select picture, "Happiness a la Mode," in which she is presented by Lewis J. Selznick, and which will be seen again today at the Ogden theatre. "Happiness a la Mode" is the sprightliest comedy plus drama in which the Select star has yet appeared, the role of the young wife being particularly well adapted to her. The story is unusual from start to finish. The author, Edwin Levin, has kept away from the bromide and the expected, and although she works with perfectly natural human situations, she turns them about in a way that makes them totally new and amazing.

It is no easy thing to take the eternal-triangle situation and make a novelty out of it, but that is what Miss Levin has done. The developments that one expects do not happen, and those that do happen are total surprises. The picture is genuine and true to life and while it will afford the audience many hearty laughs, it has some very strong dramatic moments as well.

"Happiness a la Mode" was directed by Walter Edwards, Harrison Ford is the leading man. Others in the excellent cast that support the star are Betty Schade, Myrtle Richelle, Paul Weigel, Thomas D. Persee and A. Fremont.
